Portal High To Have Halloween Carnival

The annual Halloween carnival of the Portal High School will be held Wednesday night, October 29th.

The plans call for an evening of fun for the whole family. There will be a program in the auditorium featuring choruses, songs and a Halloween play. Following the program the King and Queen will be crowned.

Included in the program will be cake walks, games of skill, guessing games, house of horrors, wonders of the world, bingo, and the country store. There will also be ice cream, hot dogs and other foods. The public is invited.

All candidates seeking election in the November primary are asked to make a special invitation. This will give you an opportunity to meet a great majority of the citizens of the Portal community.

GEORGIA'S INCOME ABOVE ESTIMATE

No Services Curtailed For Lack of Funds, Says Acting Governor Thompson

Atlanta, Oct. 21 (GPS)—Speaking before the Homebuilders' Association of Atlanta the other night, Gov. M. E. Thompson cited increased state revenues and expenditures for many state services and explained that the state of Georgia's financial condition is much better now than was anticipated last winter when a stormy session of the legislature failed to provide an appropriations bill.

"No services have been drastically curtailed, and we are getting along much better than I thought we could," Gov. Thompson said as he revealed that revenues are up from an anticipated figure of $77,000,000 at the year's beginning to $98,000,000 today.

Touching briefly on the subject of Batey State Hospital, the Governor declared the state is spending twice the amount now that was expended in the care of tubercular patients in 1945 and 1946, but added the biggest problem at Batey now is a shortage of physicians and nurses.

"Simply herding sick people together where other people are, when there aren't enough doctors and nurses to care for them, isn't conducive to good health," the Governor asserted.

Gov. Thompson, in a sort of report in the finances of the state, said salary increase pledges to school teachers had been kept, new buildings constructed at the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech, federal highway funds already needed for 1947 and 1948, and expenditures for public health tripled over 1945-46.

Only a shortage of materials, labor, engineers and draftsmen is delaying the road program, the chief executive added.

"They Only Fish"

IT WAS ONLY in last week's issue of this paper, in almost this identical space, that appreciative reference was made to a recent personal contact with the most noted national personality with whom this writer had ever had conversation.

That man was the present ambassador from Poland to the United States, who was at the time of this contact being shown civic courtesies won for his nation more than a century ago by a fellow-citizen of Poland, Count Pulaski, who gave his life in defense of the liberty of the American nation and whose remains are buried in the city of Savannah. At the moment of the utterance which was last week approvingly quoted from the lips of this distinguished guest of Savannah, Mayor Kennedy sat at his right side as they and this writer occupied the rear seat of a car enroute to the Pulaski celebration.

The words quoted last week need not be repeated, but the incident is thus referred to merely to identify the situation. A preacher friend—who was our long-time treat director and who has been a constant reader of these columns since he left this field, in conversation a recent evening with persons close to us by blood, made reference to the little story in the paper concerning our contact with the Polish statesman. This preacher suggested that he would have been pleased if further mention had been made of the impressions received by that contact, and now you have our reasons for the further telling of the philosophy of that far-away stranger whom we had never met before—and whom we most probably never will meet again.

John Kennedy, mayor of Savannah, is quite widely recognized—in civic and religious matters—as a pillar of the Baptist church in Savannah. He is a staunch personality upon whom it is safe to depend. How he came to have the particular type of religion which he represents, we are not sure, but we sort of assume that he inherited it from generations before him who also had inherited that faith. If it was good enough for his ancestors, certainly it is good enough for John Kennedy. As to this editor, he came to his present adherence to the Baptist church in Savannah. He is likewise a mystery. When he came to his eyes that morning a long while ago and looked into the face of the two persons who were responsible for his coming, he had faith in them. His faith has never wavered from that day to now. They were Methodists. How they got that way—well, maybe they knew; maybe their parents knew.

The third man who sat on that back seat of the automobile the other day, and who came from Poland—well, you can guess the denomination which claimed his loyalty. We didn't ask him, and honestly we wouldn't give a third of our finger to know. So, now we have laid all our affiliations bare before you.

Crossing a stream beyond Thunderbolt, small boats were seen at anchor along the shore. They were men fishing with hook and line. Mention was made of the inviting water, and then the thrill of fishing on a stream so placid. It was asked when most fishing was done there, and the fact developed that frequent large numbers of pleasure seekers spend their Sabbath days angling for fish in those placid streams. Somebody then referred to the oft-quoted assertion that "A Christian-minded man can worship God acceptably as he fishes along the streams on the Sabbath day." (Some of you have heard this; maybe some of you have thus defended yourselves.)

And it was here that the Polisher slowly shook his head. "Who says that, speaks lightly," said he. "True worship is only possible by a turning aside from secular things and giving solemn, reverent thought to the wonders and goodness of God; either alone in quiet, or with others of kindred mind. The man who professes to worship God on the Sabbath day while he fishes—well, he's only fishing!"

We sort of liked what the Polisher said that day, and have since then ransacked our memory in an effort to recall any man who spends his Sabbaths with a fishing pole, or a dog and gun, or set of golf clubs, or on the baseball field, who has ever made a conspicuous contribution to the spirituality of the church into whose treasury he sometimes paid cash in quite substantial volume.

We believe our preacher friend who wanted to learn more about that contact with the Polish ambassador that day as we rode along the Tybee highway toward Fort Pulaski, will recognize his words as worth remembering. "They only fish."

Football Squad To Be Honor Guests

The members of the football squad of the Statesboro High School, together with their dates and friends, will be guests of honor at the Statesboro Methodist church next Sunday night at 7:30 when the congregation has another of its Friendly Gesture Services. An informal reception will be held after the service with the Methodist Youth Fellowship hosts. The pastor announces he will preach on "Sampson, the Strongest Man in History."

Thompson Lambasts Allotment System

Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson lashed again this week the unfairness of allotting federal funds to the states on the basis of their ability to pay. In his regular Tuesday broadcast, he announced he was taking the matter up at the Southern Governors Conference which he was attending at Asheville, N. C. He specially deplored this system when it came to allotting welfare funds.

Georgia has 77,000 of its elderly citizens on its rolls, he declared. "North Carolina has only 35,000; Virginia has only 14,000. If Georgia had the same number of people to help that Virginia has, we would be able to give $70 a month."

HOLLAND—WILLIS

In the candlelight of early evening of October 18th, Miss Jacqueline Holland, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Holland, of Statesboro, became the bride of Francis Willis, son of Mrs. Amy R. Willis and the late H. V. Willis, of Savannah.

The double ring ceremony was performed in Atlanta at the home of the bride's cousin, Miss Ida Williams, 964 North Highland avenue NE, with Rev. Dr. Burns, pastor of the Peachtree Christian church officiating.

Miss Willis was her cousin's maid of honor and only attendant, wearing a two-piece suit of beige and brown wool with matching beige veil. Her accessories were of brown lizard and she wore a corsage of yellow roses.

John Daniel Holland, also a cousin of the bride, was Mr. Willis's best man.

The bride made a charming picture in a suit of dark brown wool crepe fashioned on princess tunic lines with a circular cape extending from the shoulders, an original by Paquin of Paris. She wore a white silk and imported lace blouse. Her Hattie Carnegie hat was of matching brown velvet felt trimmed with pheasant feathers, and her accessories were of Mexican reptile. The bride's only ornament was a diamond necklace, worn by her mother at her wedding and a gift from her father. A corsage of white orchids completed her costume.

Mrs. Willis is a graduate of Statesboro High School and Draughton's Business College, Savannah. Prior to her marriage she was employed in the personnel department of the Turpentine Rosin Factors Co. Inc. in Savannah. Mr. Willis is a graduate of Savannah High School and is a navy veteran of the South Pacific campaigns. Prior to his induction into the navy, and following his discharge in March, 1945, he held a position in the auditor of disbursement department of the Central of Georgia railroad.

MEDICAL MIRACLE

Today Your Pharmacist Drops A Few Facts About...

NITRATE OF AMYL
In 1867, Dr. Lauder Brunton, of Edinburgh, Scotland, became one of the heroes of medicine when he discovered a drug that would relieve the terrible, frightening pain of Angina Pectoris. A few drops of this "new thing" of the nitrate of amyl—on a piece of gauze, held by the doctor for a few moments—relieved the pain and attack of Angina Pectoris in 30 seconds.
